I have read and understand the State of Nevada Contractor's law regarding Homeowner's Building Permits for construction of a dwelling.

Applicant must own or be buying the property he is building on.

Applicant must buy all materials and perform the work for which permits are issued.

The dwelling must be occupied by the homeowner upon completion.

Applicant is responsible for all construction for which he is issued a permit.

It is illegal by State law for an Owner/Builder without a State Contractor's License to build for speculation.
