COUNCILMAN BARLOW invited RYAN WOLFINGTON, Executive Director of the U.S. Tennis Association of Nevada, to the podium. The Councilman recognized KIMBERLY and KRISTOFER YEE for their numerous accomplishments within the world of tennis and academia and asked members of No Out to stand and be recognized. Their father, ADAM YEE, stated he is not only extremely proud of both his children, but is also very proud of the City they proudly represent in tournaments.

MR. WOLFINGTON thanked the City of Las Vegas for creating three extraordinary tennis centers that attract top tennis players while providing amazing places for local students to grow and develop their sport. He also stated that KRISTOFER has over 20 offers for nearly full scholarships and that both of these children can pretty much choose where they want to attend college.

KIMBERLY thanked the Councilman for the recognition but clarified that she could not have accomplished as much without the support of her academy and that all of the students are accomplished.

KRISTOFER thanked his parents for their amazing support and encouragement and thanked his friends for their support.

MAYOR GOODMAN stated that she had played tennis in her younger years and believes that as you get older you should give back to the community to pass on what you have learned.
