Minutes:

CHAIR TROWBRIDGE declared the Public Hearing open.

DOUG RANKIN, Planning and Development, stated the site is composed of a mini-storage facility, as well as stealth cell tower contained within the signage. Staff finds that the proposed additional cell tower stealth design flag pole is not compatible with the existing residential area and recommended denial.

PLANNING COMMISSION MEETING OF: AUGUST 27, 2009

SHANE HENNESSY-YORK appeared on behalf of Clear Wireless, LLC. He clarified that the existing communication facility is located on the northeast corner of the parcel. Another stand-alone tower is approximately 50 feet away from the proposed communication facility. MR. HENNESSY-YORK outlined the different options including putting antennas on the billboard on the south side of Charleston Boulevard. Unfortunately, the owner was not interested in entertaining lease negotiations. Other options considered found that some of the existing facilities were either not compatible due to structural integrity or its height could not provide the coverage needed and some signs did not meet code requirements. They also looked at installing on the existing sign located on the same parcel but because the Code specifies that no sign can be greater than 40 feet, this option was not appropriate. The current application is for a 60-foot stealth communication facility designed as a flag pole. There is a gap in-between different buildings and they are looking to integrate their facility into the buildings' architecture.

TODD FARLOW suggested that the cell tower be installed on the adjacent low income housing.

MR. RANKIN clarified that there is only one existing stealth tower on the site. MR. HENNESSY-YORK replied there are no antennas on the sign. MR. RANKIN pointed out there is a cell tower within the signage itself and it is perfectly legal. If there is another cell tower on the site, it would be an illegal tower and it would be addressed by Code Enforcement.

COMMISSIONER EVANS indicated he likes the idea of a flag but expressed concern about the flag pole becoming a visual intrusion on the adjacent residential. MR. HENNESSY-YORK replied that the site exceeds all residential adjacency standards. The flag is approximately 10 feet tall; however, if that is too large, the size could be decreased. The Commissioner was not concerned about the size but rather about the noise the flag might cause. MR. HENNESSY-YORK noted that the residential to the north is 457 feet, to the south is 282 feet and to the east 308 feet.

COMMISSIONER TRUESDELL indicated that storage facilities have proven to be appropriate if the towers do not directly impact residential. The size of the flag is appropriate.

CHAIR TROWBRIDGE declared the Public Hearing closed.
